event, which marked the only dive ever made from the bridge. The interest shown in the event, Dominy said, shows how aquatic-minded Juneau people are, and he stated that it was a distinct surprise to him to learn, when he first came to Juneau, that there was no swimming pool or tank of any kind. "Every one living near water should know how to swim," Chuck said, "and it is deplorable that a city as large as Juneau is without a swimming pool."

Dominy said rumors about town that he was paid for making the dive are absolutely false. He has won first place in approximately 50 major diving meets along the Pacific Coast and in Hawaii, and he plans to continue at a later date, and he added that any reports that would reflect on his amateur standing are absolutely groundless.

Incidentally, the tremendous crowd that lined the bridge and both sides of the Channel yesterday testifies to the reader appeal of The Daily Alaska Empire, which promoted the event, and carried the exclusive advance stories of the exhibition.

1,300 POUND SEA MONSTER DISCOVERED

Crowds on Washington
State Beach Examine
Strange Creature

ABERDEEN, Wash., June 8. — Crowds on Copalis Beach here are examining the remains of a 12-foot, 1,300 pound sea monster resembling the legendary sea serpents, found on the beach.

Dr. D. W. Black, Baltimore zoologist, and his two assistants are working as scraping off the flesh and will mount the skeleton for display either at the University of Washington in Seattle or at an eastern museum.

The monster has a long goat-like head, a body tapered like a buffalo's and a 4-foot tail similar to that of a muskrat. It has a heavy only skin and fourteen ribs. There is a possibility the monster may be a relative of Amy Cadborosaurus, a Vancouver sea serpent found a few years ago.
